I started writing music for this project back in the summer of 2005, while on holiday in Scotland, with my lovely daughter, Katie: I find that my creativity is at its best when there are no distractions and I'm a long way from home. Upon my return, in early 2006, I recorded the basic tracks with the band. For many reasons, I became discouraged with this project—originally titled “Crisis.” (And, funny enough, that’s exactly what it turned out to be.) Two years later, and with everything pretty much shelved, my good friend Robert Lang (Big Bug Sound), came to me and offered to take on the monumental task of kick-starting this project again.

From January 2008 till June 2008, we re-recorded key elements of the project and eliminated four of the original songs. With Robert's enthusiastic dedication to recording and re-mixing the project, he made me a believer in this project again. Thanks, Robert. Most of all, I'm so very honored to have had the opportunity to work with so many great people and musicians—each contributing their tremendous talents to make this project (finally) a reality. Special thanks to my good friends: Todd Chuba, Bryce Budge, Joe Garcia, Beth Lederman, Mario Mendivil, Jacob Koller, and, of course, Robert Lang.

Cheers, Bob.

A man with a mustache, wearing a blue sweater, is holding a dark-colored Gibson acoustic guitar. He is looking directly at the camera. The background features palm trees against a clear blue sky. The guitar has a light-colored fretboard and a dark headstock with the Gibson logo. The overall image has a professional, artistic feel.
